

Before Wisconsin had its no call list, I was constantly being harassed by telemarketers on a daily basis. After signing up on Wisconsin's no call list, I finally had some peace and quiet on weekends and evenings. If I am interested in buying a product or a service, I will contact the company. I do not want unsolicited calls made to my phone number morning, noon and night. This decision should be left to the individual as to who he wants to be contacted by. After all isn't our government there to listen to what the people want and not what big business can buy from our government. If people want these companies to contact them, they are not on the no call list! That's the problem, too many people have signed up for this list; That alone should tell you what the right thing to do is.
